Bethel Votes To Lease Field For Recreation

At a special town meeting Friday evening at Odeon Hall it was voted to accept a 10 year lease of land near Lovers Lane from Gould Academy for a nominal rental of one dollar, to be used as a recreational field or playground.

After election as moderator, Hugh Thurston suggested a 20 minute discussion of the article before taking a vote. This was unanimously agreed upon, although less than that time was taken.

Selectman Ernest Bisbee asked for a discussion of the conditions of the lease and Kimball Ames outlined the terms as follows: 1—Lease from Gould Academy to the Town of Bethel of the field 10 years for $1.00. 2—If in the opinion of the Academy trustees the use of the field is objectionable the lease may be cancelled. 3—If the Academy requires the land the lease may be cancelled. In this case the town will be reimbursed for improvements. 4—Plans for any buildings erected must be subject to trustees' approval. 6—Town of Bethel assumes responsibility and the Academy is held free from all liability. 6—Field not to be used for organized or semi-professional sports. 7—Field not to be used for carnivals, circuses, or events to which admission is charged.

John P Howe asked for information as to present plans. Mr Ames stated that plans were to provide a playground for school children. The baseball diamond as planned would be smaller than regulation size. Use of equipment and labor for developing the site is already assured.

Superintendent Donald Christie spoke of the needs of the grammar school for athletic teams' practice. Last year they used the field of John Harrington (the former fairgrounds) at Mayville, which are now closed. The new field could be used for the children's needs the balance of the year.

Stanley Davis brought up the question of use for town baseball teams. It was explained that the proposed field was not planned for such games.

Philip Chadbourne moved that the lease be accepted, and the motion passed with only one or two dissenting votes. On motion of Henry Hastings the selectmen were authorized to sign the lease.

It is understood that the field will be in readiness for the use of the school sports teams this fall.

Survey Committee Considers Costs of Reopening Schools

The Bethel School Survey Committee held its monthly meeting on Monday Monday, July 18. Eleven of the fifteen members were present at the meeting. Dr Walters was an invited guest. Edward McMonagle, Director of Schooling in Unorganized Territories for the State was also present. Mr McMonagle expressed the willingness of the State to cooperate in any way possible with the present problem of extra schoolhousing which confronts the citizens of Bethel. He made it clear that the students from the unorganized towns of Albany and Mason were sent to Bethel because it was the best and most logical place for them to go to school. It was pointed out that the parents of most of these children make Bethel the center to which they come for other activities.

There was some discussion of figures of estimated costs of bringing the rural schools up to the same standard of pupil comfort as the village schools offer. The overall cost of doing this figured somewhere between $2500 and $3000 per building.

There was much discussion about need of more rooms and possible sites for them. Before the next meeting in August it was decided to visit some of the recently completed elementary school buildings in other towns in this part of the state. This is to be done with the idea of determining the type, location, general construction, and costs involved.

Must Register, Selective Service

Calling attention to the fact that failure to register is a violation of law and makes the delinquent liable to penalty, Brigadier General George M Carter, Maine State Director of Selective Service, has again outlined registration requirements under the Selective Service Act of 1948, which he said he believed were not thoroughly understood by all the general public.

"The obligation to register," General Carter said, "is a continuing obligation and must be fulfilled regardless of whether men are being inducted into the armed forces under the Selective Service Act. The obligation to register is imposed by the Act on every male, citizen or resident, in the United States between the ages of 18 and 26, with only the general exception of members of the armed forces on active duty and certain aliens."

The young man who becomes 18 is required to register at a local board office within five days of the date of his eighteenth birthday, General Carter explained, but if he happens to be away from home he need not return; he may register at the nearest local board convenient to him and the record will be sent to the local board having jurisdiction, even though it is in another State. After he registers, it is mandatory that a registrant keep his local board informed of any change in his address or change in status, the director pointed out. This applies after he becomes 26 a well as before.

Questioned concerning the man who did not register during the designated registration days—August 30 to September 18, 1948— because he was then on active duty in the armed forces, General Carter explained that he is required to register within 30 days of the time he was separated from the armed forces.

"Any person who changes from a status which did not require his registration to a status which does require it must register promptly to be within the law," General Carter said, adding that those who were out of the country on registration days must register within five days following the date they reenter the United States, which includes Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

General Carter said that noncitizens entering the United States for the first time are required to register at a local board within six months following the date of their entry.

The maximum penalty for violation of any of the provisions of the Selective Service Act of 1948, General Carter pointed out, is five years in prison or a fine of $10,000 or both.

DEVELOPMENT COMMISSION DISTRIBUTING NEW MAP

It was prepared and printed by the Planning Survey Division of the Maine Highway Department under the direction of R D Graves.

Colorful and easy to read, the new map includes much information about Maine in addition to the usual highway directions.

Back and front covers of the map consist of two color photographs, one of the coastal region and one of inland Maine.

Of particular help to visitors is a series of graphs explaining Maine's highway marking system. Adjacent is a letter from Colonel Francis J McCabe, Chief of the Maine State Police, offering the services of the state police to visitors and urging them to exercise care in driving to "insure an enjoyable vacation and a safe return home."

Listed on the map are Maine's golf courses and their locations, the hunting and fishing license fees and the name and location of Maine's parks and memorials.

Noteworthy is the extreme clarity of the map of Maine. Even the smallest places are easily located and the roads and markings are readily identifiable. Maps of the various cities will make it easier for the visiting motorist to make his way through the state without confusion.

ANNOUNCE CHANGES IN GOULD FACULTY

Mrs Madeline Gibbs, freshman English; Vance Richardson, mathematics; Miss Marion Stallwood, physical education instructor for girls; and Mrs Helen Dyer who substituted for Lancelot Cooke will not return to the Gould faculty this fall.

Mr Richardson will be replaced by Robert Clunie of Damariscotta, who has had many years of successful teaching and administrative experience in the schools of the state and returns to Gould after a two-year absence. His classroom is always a place of hard work in an atmosphere of pleasant surroundings. Mr Clunie's wit and stories always hit the right situation and his influence about the school will be a pleasure both to the pupils and the administration.

Mrs Gibbs and Mrs Dyer are being replaced by Mrs Stella Dakin of New Sharon. She will teach freshman English and assume special duties in the girls' dormitory as well as do some guidance work with the day girls.

Mrs Dakin was an outstanding personality on the faculty of Farmington State Teachers College for a long time, but left teaching a few years ago to do Red Cross work among the schools. Her return to the classroom will give Gould a capable, experienced, and effective teacher in this important field.

Miss Stallwood is leaving to go into physical education work for the army in Japan. Her successor will be announced in the near future.

SWIMMING LESSONS POPULAR —MORE DAMAGE AT BEACH

The swimming classes are still proving popular even though rained out a couple of days. The Sunday crowd pulled the "marahmallow" area marker lines but they have been restored with the help of the Charles Freeman family. The Citizen has donated two prizes for the mid-season judging of improvement in the grade 1-5 and the grade 6-9 groups. It is hoped that prizes will be donated for the final awards.

Tuesday morning, one from Locke Mills, June Grieg; afternoon, Marguerite Sumner, Edith Rowe. Wednesday morning, Eva Perry, June Scothorne; afternoon, Norma Jodrey, Josie Whitman. Thursday morning, Marie Swan, Luella Sclarrafa; afternoon, one from Locke Mills, Alma Young. Friday morning, Jane Kneeland, Polly Myers; afternoon, Harriett Noyes, Marjorie Freeman. Those who cannot attend are asked to get a substitute.

SPRINKLER SYSTEM AVERTS LARGE DAMAGE IN MILL FIRE

A fire at the mill of Newton & Tebbets, Inc., at West Bethel was extinguished without great damage Tuesday afternoon. The blaze, which started when a breaking light bulb ignited gasoline in a tractor which was being repaired, opened 23 heads in the sprinkler system. This held the flames for a few minutes until water from the company's hose completed the job. The Bethel fire department made the run with pumper and tank truck but the blaze was controlled on thier arrival.

SALVATION ARMY APPEAL STILL IN PROGRESS

The annual Salvation Army appeal in this district is continuing with a house-to-house canvass conducted by Henry Remington of the Army's Provincial Public Relations Department. In the meantime contributions are still being received by the local treasurer, Miss Frances Morrill, at the Bethel Savings Bank.

During the year the service fund for this district is administered by a committee which includes Carl Brown, Miss Frances Morrill and Mrs Mary Carroll. Each year this fund is available for local needs and has many times been of help to people in this area. This district includes Bethel, Locke Mills, Bryant Pond, Hanover, Andover, Upton and Gilead.

AUTO FATALITIES IN STATE DECREASE 41%

The first half of this year is now behind us and highway fatal accident figures show that Maine has experienced the best accidnt record in its history for this period. At the end of the first six months, the people of this state have reduced deaths resulting from automobile accidents by 41 per cent over last year.

This reduction is due to the fact that there have been 29 fewer accidents in rural areas during the first six months. Fatal accidents in urban areas have been cut by only three.

Lincoln county which consistently has the best accident record, shares the honor of no fatal accidents with Franklin and Piscataquis.

However, two of our largest counties, Aroostook and Cumberland, have contributed most to our lower death rate with a reduction of 11 and 10 respectively.

We have now more motor vehicles registered than ever before with nearly 300,000 resident cars and trucks using our highway. The latest figures in gasoline consumption show that there is about a 2 per cent increase in travel during a comparative period in 1948. In spite of this increased travel, Maine has been able to reduce fatalities from 79 last year to 47 over a similar period this year.

This means that the lives of 32 people have been saved by greater care in the use of our streets and highways. Next to the saving of life, the economic lose is to be considered. By use of accepted standards in figuring automobile losses, the reduction of accidents in Maine during the first 6 months has saved the State approximately 2 million dollars.

In view of the above, it seems necessary at this time to call attention to our accident experience during the first 12 days of July. Ten people have been killed in this short time. At this time it is necessary to appeal to every citizen of this state for his whole-hearted cooperation in this fight against automobile accidents.

We know the situation can be corrected, and the responsibility for this correction depends upon the public officials concerned with traffic accident prevention as well as upon the public spirited citizens.

Sgt. John deWinter, Director, Division of Traffic and Safety, Maine State Police.

Thought Control

The wisest man who ever lived said that "as a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." I believe that means that if a person can control his own thinking powers, he can make himself whatever he wants to be. A man is what he is, because of what is deep inside his heart and mind. At the same time, his actions are the product of his thought. A man's deeds reflect only that which lies within him.

A person living in a free country, like America, has the perfect liberty to think whatever he will. This is a great freedom. But not to be overlooked is the heavy responsibility that goes along with this privilege. An American has the duty of managing his mind in such a way that his family, his neighbors, his country—even he, himself—will benefit because of his way of living. This freedom brings duty and responsibility.

Control Is Yours

A man, then, should endeavor to think straight, for his own sake. More than that, he needs to think straight for the good of America, the land that grants him his freedom. Well, then, do you and I have a chance to be straight-thinking citizens? Yes, a good chance, much better than you could hope to find anywhere else on the globe. If you're young, you have a better chance of getting an education. If older you have more newspapers, books, and other things to read.

More radio, more movies, more television. You see, those things are not yet controlled by the state, or by a political party. You have a chance to do your own thinking and to say what your thoughts are. That's one great reason why the planners and plotters, who desire to have full "thought control" in their hands, are not getting you in their power as soon as they'd hoped. Thought control in America is still in YOUR hands.

What of the Future?

Yet, sometimes I wonder whether your thoughts will always be your own, even in America. We do not picture the idea of "Thought Control" by the State, or a "Propaganda Ministry" as belonging to the American way. But there are those who would very gladly grab control of the thinking of the nation. They would not do this openly. They would do it by methods that seem to have nothing to do with thought control.

Here's a typical example. One of the leading "thinkers" in Washington in the Thirties, who at one time headed the President's Brain-Trust group, once had this to say about the "health and welfare" proposals. "There is a little group of a quarter-million men in this country who visit each and every family in the home at least once a year or who are called on in their offices. They have in their charge the most precious thing that each and every individual citizen has—his or her health."

Government Thought

"They are chosen because they are the one person in all the world that these citizens, who are their patients, will trust their most cherished possession to. Those men are the physicians and the dentists of the country. If we can ever control the medical and dental professions we will control the thinking of the entire United States." In other words, give us government medicine and the rest will fall into our hands!

Thought control, that is it. Author of the statement was Prof Rexford G Tugwell, whose socialistic textbooks have been thrown out of many schools in this country. The question will may be raising as to how many other backers of socialized medicine (compulsory health insurance) may not also have in mind the complete thought control of all Americans. Their goal is government management of everything, even your thoughts! The same ambition could be influencing some people who want federal aid to education extended to every public school district in every state of the union.

Dale Carnegie

UNINTENTIONAL CRUELTY

WILLIAM RALSTON, Toronto, Canada, told me a story so distressing that I can bring myself to pass it on to you only because of the good I think it may do. Parents sometimes hurt their children unnecessarily in their thoughtlessness and in their assurance that being parents gives them the privilege of saying what they like.

D. Carnegie

Many children are sensitive about imposing on their parents, and this type of child, from adolescence on, is on the alert not to be in the way. Such children want to know that they are wanted, or they don't want to be there.

The story Mr. Ralston tells is about a couple we will call Mr. and Mrs. Yancy (because that is not their name).

Mr. Ralston visited in the home of this couple a few days after the war was over. Said Mr. Yancy, "Steve (their son) will be back soon and we must get back to normal life. He can run the grocery business and we will take a good long rest, maybe take a trip somewhere."

Mrs. Yancy agreed, said they'd go to some of the places she had long wanted to see. They were discussing their plans with great pleasure when the telephone rang. Mr. Yancy answered it, and after a few moments of exclamations and conversation, he turned to his wife who sat eagerly listening as she guessed who was on the other end of the line.

"It's Steve, dear," said Mr. Yancy, "he wants to talk to you about bringing a buddy home with him."

At the telephone, Mrs. Yancy welcomed her son eagerly. But when he said, "My buddy got kinda shot up at Manila and lost an arm and a leg, so I thought I'd bring him home."

His mother asked him to hold the wire while she discussed the matter with her husband, who went back to the telephone and said, "Your mother and I have been working pretty hard; and since they will care for your buddy in a veterans' home, we think he'd better go there. He'll be better off there. We need a long rest, we're not getting any younger, you know."

"All right, Dad," the boy answered. "He won't be a burden on you."

The next morning came a telegram from the war department. Steve had committed suicide. His body was brought home for a fine funeral. When the casket was opened, there he was in uniform. One leg of his trousers and one arm of his sleeve lay flat—empty.

THIS WEEK in Washington

ADMINISTRATION FORCES broke even in the congress this week with a victory in passage of the housing bill and a defeat in the senate over the injunction and seizure provisions of the labor bill in national emergencies.

The housing bill as passed provides for a goal of 810,000 low-rent housing units and would provide for the expenditure of $1.5 billion in slum clearance over five years, for rural housing and for a broad housing research program. While the real estate lobby has charged that the cost of this bill will run as high as 20 billion dollars, the best estimate from observers here who are qualified is that the cost likely will be not more than 10 billion dollars spread over thirty years.

As far as the public housing feature of the bill is concerned, local officials in communities must ask for a public housing project before one can be instituted. This is another one of those measures which opponents have charged is "socialistic." However, if it is, observers point out, a majority of both the house and senate have voted for it.

In the fight over Taft-Hartley repeal and the administration's new labor law, it appears, say observers, that there likely will be no outright repeal at this session, that the amendments will largely follow those suggested by Senator Taft, and that thus the whole fight over the Taft-Hartley law will again be thrown into the 1950 elections.

Officials of the Department of Agriculture feel that farm prices have just about reached the limit of their decline and that they will level off for the next few months. Meat prices may decline further.

A judiciary subcommittee of the house is holding full-scale but closed hearings over the problem of resettling war displaced persons. One of the first witnesses was John J. McCloy, new U. S. high commissioner of Germany. Special attention is being devoted to some 14 million people who were forced from agricultural sections of Germany into industrial areas ravaged by war. Congressman Francis E. Walter of Pennsylvania said his committee is studying a plan which would authorize the World Bank to loan money to persons desiring to migrate.

One of the highlights of the week's news was the calling of columnist Westbrook Pegler as a witness before a house labor subcommittee. Pegler was scheduled to appear July 7 under a subpoena by Congressman Andrew Jacobs of Indiana who said Pegler "claims to have a treasure of information on the subject of labor racketeering."

The senate has voted to create a new senate small business committee. A former such committee created after much opposition in the 80th congress died with the last congress.

The battle of the "co-op buck" has people interested here in the nation's capital. The National Tax Equality association has been circulating "tens of millions" of imitation dollar bills attacking the tax exemption of farm and other cooperative associations. Secret service officials in Washington and Chicago cracked down on NTEA and seized the plates from which the "bucks" were printed from a Chicago printer and ordered NTEA to stop circulation on the ground they resembled too closely real dollar bills. NTEA denied the plates had been seized and said "the coop buck is still in production." However, civil service agents confirmed they had seized the plates.

NTEA in reporting its expenditures as a lobby organization said that during the first quarter of this year they have received contributions from 17 utility concerns which are listed among the 44 contributors who gave them more than $500 each. According to observers, reason private utility concerns are backing the NTEA lobby is that one of the largest cooperatives is the National Cooperative association.

The 17 utility firms which are backing this fight against the farm cooperatives as listed in the NTEA report include: Alabama Power Co., Arkansas Power & Light Company, Connecticut Power & Light Co., Florida Power & Light Company, Public Service Company of Indiana, Louisiana Power & Light Co., New Orleans Public Service Co., Ebasco Services, Inc., Carolina Power & Light Company, Pacific Power & Light Company, Southwestern Public Service Company, Lone Star Gas Company, Texas Power & Light Company, Texas Electric Service Company, Virginia Electric & Power Company, Wisconsin Electric Power Company and Wisconsin Power & Light Company.

OUTSIDE THE LAW

HOUSE INVESTIGATORS are concerned over evidence that the Red hierarchy will go underground if the eleven "Americans" being tried in New York for conspiracy against our government are convicted.

It is suspected that orders have already arrived from Moscow to break the party into small groups—members of one group being unknown to those of other groups; each group having a leader; these leaders also meeting in small groups and one of them contacting someone higher up.

It is a good plan—if it works. But soon or later the F.B.I. will get their names; and the fact that they have gone underground will place them in a more perilous position with the courts and in the est'mation of the American public.

As of today the public is prone to take the "American" communist more or less as a joke. And this is most unfortunate. The citizens of every nation which these horrible creatures have enslaved once regarded them in the same light. But now that they are beginning to sneak underground (like any other worm) our public will at long last wake up to the fact that there is an actual plot in existence to overthrow our government by bloody force.

What should be the reaction to these traitors and their new plans? Surely not a repetition of the long expensive trial before Judge Medina! Should they not be placed "outside the law?" We can be incredulous if we like, but these people are plotting the violent death of hundreds of thousands of good Americans.

Their Russian brothers have liquidated millions—small farm owners, millionaires, little shop keepers and labor leaders, and even each other. The very first to face the firing squad would be the president of the United States, his cabinet and the members of congress. That has always been the Red routine — why should it suddenly change in our case? Don't answer—IT WON'T.

We are losing the battle for the survival of democracy on most fronts. For our children's sake, if not for our own, let us hold this front against that ghastly living-death devised by diseased men and women for their own selfish benefit.

The LOW DOWN FROM HICKORY GROVE

"Little fellers" doing "big things" is what we been having too much of—that is how I diagnose our symptoms. We are in bad shape says Mr Brannan. Mr Brannan is our Dept. of Agriculture Big Smoke. He says that "the biggest econsmic crash in history" is around the corner—but he can fix it, he says.

For years now, Govt. doctors have been prescribing. But now, after this time—and the same doctoring—the undertaker is around the corner. That is what the man says—Mr Brannan that is. But open up, he says—this new elixir is just the ticket. And gullible as we are—congress, too—and a sucker for shenannigans, we will likely say okay. We will dig up the do re mi to keep prices up for the farmer at the same time, he says, we can buy cheaper at the corner grocery. Mr Barnum and Mr Bailey—both of 'em—if they were living now, would need to take a back seat to this new and great "Govt' wizard"—and round and round she goes.

And now—with a tip to USA senators. The senate is investigating gasoline prices. Jump on a boat, I say, for socialistic France or Italy where gas sells at 2 times as much as here, or take a squint at the crepe hanging on the Texas gas pumps where new taxes are jacking up prices.

Yours with the low down,

Prayers of Confession.

Lesson for July 24: Psalms 51:1-5; 51:1-2, 7-13.

Memory Selection: Psalms 86:5.

We use today two of the penitential Psalms. From them we learn that confession is necessary to true worship. We learn from the 32nd Psalm that a man who would truly call upon God must be right in his heart. The misery attendant upon his transgression can be ended when a sinful man repents, and with clean hands and pure heart he can then worship the Lord.

It is believed that Psalm 51 was written by David in his repentance for his sin with Bathsheba and against Uriah. After trampling upon the home of Uriah, he had Uriah, one of his mighty men, sent into the forefront of the hottest battle that he should be slain. But neither peasant nor king can sin and get by. Through the stern old prophet, Nathan, the king was led to bitter repentance. Then, in Psalm 51, he voiced the cry of a sin-stricken conscience.

When the king had been forgiven he sang of restored salvation. And he learned that only in getting right with God could he teach transgressors God's ways. Genuine confession is essential to true service. Only they whose lives are above reproach should dare to serve in God's name. Too often the work of the kingdom is attempted by men and women whose manner of living does not prepare them for such high service. Let confession be made, where needed, not only for the joy and wellbeing of those who confess but also for the blessing of God upon their work as they serve others.

NEW COURSE ANNOUNCED AT COLBY NEXT FALL

A new course "Ethical Issues in the Modern World" will be offered by Colby College next fall, President J Seelye Bixler announced Wednesday.

The course will be open to juniors and seniors and will be offered jointly by the departments of philosophy and religion.

The course will be largely a panel discussion with all professors of the two departments present to participate.

An effort will be made to define what ethical issues mean today and to show both how complex they are and how tragic are some of the choices involved. What, for example, entered into the decision to drop the atomic bomb at Hiroshima? What moral alternatives were faced? What are some of the problems facing the commission for control of atomic energy? What are the rights and duties of the citizen at this point.

The course will consider the part religion plays today and whether the thinking of the great ancient philosophers is out of date. What is the role of the conscience in international affairs. In what circumtances is war justified? Should scientists have a sense of sin, or should they be indifferent to the uses made of their discoveries?

Other issues to be discussed include freedom and security, the rights of minorities, ethics of the family, the treatment of criminals, the code of business and of the professions.

An object of the course is to bring to the students a realization of the seriousness of these problems and bring to them the tools for a reflective opinion of the problems.

TRIAL BY JURY

All through the year The Salvation Army is on trial in the court of public opinion, and every year the verdict is the same—unqualified approval.

But something is needed to "implement" this approval, as the commentators say! and this implementation is afforded through the Salvation Army Annual appeal for funds.

Every adult in the community is a jury member, having an opportunity to cast a vote by a donation that will help continue the good work of The Salvation Army.

In 94 active centers in New England, The Salvation Army conducts individual programs of family and transient relief, as well as vigorous character-building and spiritual activities, the only limitation being the availability of funds. Its Booth Memorial Home, Boston, for unmarried mothers, its fresh-air camps, its work among prisoners and parolees, and other large-scale projects in New England, need and deserve the support of men and women of good will everywhere.

Cast your vote—make your gift!

Prayers of Confession.

Lesson for July 24: Psalms 51:1-5; 51:1-2, 7-13.

Memory Selection: Psalms 86:5.

We use today two of the penitential Psalms. From them we learn that confession is necessary to true worship. We learn from the 32nd Psalm that a man who would truly call upon God must be right in his heart. The misery attendant upon his transgression can be ended when a sinful man repents, and with clean hands and pure heart he can then worship the Lord.

It is believed that Psalm 51 was written by David in his repentance for his sin with Bathsheba and against Uriah. After trampling upon the home of Uriah, he had Uriah, one of his mighty men, sent into the forefront of the hottest battle that he should be slain. But neither peasant nor king can sin and get by. Through the stern old prophet, Nathan, the king was led to bitter repentance. Then, in Psalm 51, he voiced the cry of a sin-stricken conscience.

When the king had been forgiven he sang of restored salvation. And he learned that only in getting right with God could he teach transgressors God's ways. Genuine confession is essential to true service. Only they whose lives are above reproach should dare to serve in God's name. Too often the work of the kingdom is attempted by men and women whose manner of living does not prepare them for such high service. Let confession be made, where needed, not only for the joy and wellbeing of those who confess but also for the blessing of God upon their work as they serve others.

NEW COURSE ANNOUNCED AT COLBY NEXT FALL

A new course "Ethical Issues in the Modern World" will be offered by Colby College next fall, President J Seelye Bixler announced Wednesday.

The course will be open to juniors and seniors and will be offered jointly by the departments of philosophy and religion.

The course will be largely a panel discussion with all professors of the two departments present to participate.

An effort will be made to define what ethical issues mean today and to show both how complex they are and how tragic are some of the choices involved. What, for example, entered into the decision to drop the atomic bomb at Hiroshima? What moral alternatives were faced? What are some of the problems facing the commission for control of atomic energy? What are the rights and duties of the citizen at this point.

The course will consider the part religion plays today and whether the thinking of the great ancient philosophers is out of date. What is the role of the conscience in international affairs. In what circumtances is war justified? Should scientists have a sense of sin, or should they be indifferent to the uses made of their discoveries?

Other issues to be discussed include freedom and security, the rights of minorities, ethics of the family, the treatment of criminals, the code of business and of the professions.

An object of the course is to bring to the students a realization of the seriousness of these problems and bring to them the tools for a reflective opinion of the problems.

TRIAL BY JURY

All through the year The Salvation Army is on trial in the court of public opinion, and every year the verdict is the same—unqualified approval.

But something is needed to "implement" this approval, as the commentators say! and this implementation is afforded through the Salvation Army Annual appeal for funds.

Every adult in the community is a jury member, having an opportunity to cast a vote by a donation that will help continue the good work of The Salvation Army.

In 94 active centers in New England, The Salvation Army conducts individual programs of family and transient relief, as well as vigorous character-building and spiritual activities, the only limitation being the availability of funds. Its Booth Memorial Home, Boston, for unmarried mothers, its fresh-air camps, its work among prisoners and parolees, and other large-scale projects in New England, need and deserve the support of men and women of good will everywhere.

STUBBORN AS A MULE

(A Short Story) BY RICHARD HILL WILKINSON

OLD MAN STEVENSON picked up a stone and chucked it at the plodding burro. The missle struck with uncanny accuracy. At regular intervals he chucked pebbles that bounded against Lop Ears' rump.

At the end of an hour Lop Ears stopped of his own accord and craned his neck to stare pensively at the man.

"Git along with yuh," the old man cackled. "That's five times this mornin' you tried to turn around an' go back home. Ain't I told you we gotta get into Borax to record our claim?"

The only answer to this soliloquy was a long, drawn-out bray. Old Man Stevenson sighed and began to dream dreams. Twenty years he'd spent trying to make a strike. Twenty years of plodding over the hot desert sands. Twenty years alone in the desert with no human being to talk to, nothing for companionship save old Lop Ears, the mule, and his hopes and dreams.

Once, twice he raised the six-shooter and brought it down with crushing force on the old man's head.

And now at last he'd struck it! He was rich. Richer than he'd ever dreamed. Why, there was enough gold in the pack on Lop Ears to keep him comfortable for the rest of his life. But more valuable than that was the map of the country where he'd made his strike.

Stevenson's dreams ended abruptly. Lop Ears had stopped again. The prospector looked up. A man stood in the trail. A man of evil features, who held a gun in his hand and regarded the old prospector with the ugliest of grins. Stevenson's heart sank. Too well did he know that face. It belonged to Black Renard, most desperate and wicked of desert bandits.

Old man Stevenson tried to put on a front.

"What you got that gun on me fer, Renard? I ain't got nothin' yuh want. Lemme go about my business."

The bandit's eyes flashed wickedly. "No?" he purred. "Then why are you heading into Borax now?"

"To grubstake myself, you idiot! Where else would I go?"

"So?" said Renard, silkily. "So? But it was only two weeks ago you came out for a grub stake. A man is a fool to bring in only a two weeks' supply at once."

Anger at the cool, insolent manner of the outlaw welled up in Stevenson's breast. He took a step forward. "Lemme by, Renard! I ain't got nothin' you want. You've gone through my pack before. You ——" He stopped as Renard pulled back the hammer of his six-shooter.

"So?" said the silky voice. "It will do no harm then to look again."

He reached out to lift the tarpaulin on Lop Ears' back. Old Man Stevenson suddenly saw red. With a cry of rage he leaped forward. Renard's eyes glinted. Once, twice he raised the six-shooter and brought it down with crushing force on the old man's head.

When Old Man Stevenson opened his eyes he was alone on the desert. Renard and Lop Ears had vanished. He sat up, groaning. His head ached unmercifully.

Presently he got to his feet. Instinctively he set out over the trail he had travelled that day. His subconscious mind told him that it was shorter to return to his desert cabin than to try and make Borax. Moreover, he would be safe there. No one, not even Renard, knew of the cabin's location.

It was only the instinctive desire to live that kept Old Man Stevenson from quitting. After all, he didn't have much to live for. Life wouldn't hold much for him in the future.

It was daylight before Old Man Stevenson came within sight of his cabin. Wearily he plodded up the rise and came to Lop Ears' corral and paused there to rest. It was then that his heart leaped into his throat.

From within the deep gloom of the corral had come the long drawn-out bray of a burro. Old Man Stevenson sprang through the open corral gate. Lop Ears was standing there, watching him pensively from the gloom. And atop his back was the pack containing the gold, untouched.

Old Man Stevenson buried his face in the shaggy hair of the mule's neck.

"Lop Ears, you ole son-of-a-gun, you come home after all, in spite of my orders. You old, good-for-nothing, ornery jackass. You're—stubborn as a mule."

"EASY DOES IT"

By HELEN HALE

CHOPPED PARSLEY and ground allspice give a tangy flavor to ground lamb patties If more flavor is desired, marinate (soak) the patties in French dressing.

For a successful salad dressing for green, summery salads, add crisp bacon bits to French dressing. The bacon should be added just before serving.

Ever tried tender asparagus tips with creamed, leftover ham? They give a perfect combination especially if served riding on top of hot, flaky biscuits or as a filling for crisp popovers.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK

Hawaiian Baked Pork

(Serves 4)

3 medium sweet potatoes
2 cups crushed pineapple
2 tablespoons brown sugar
4 shoulder pork steaks
Salt and pepper
4 strips bacon

Place pineapple in the bottom of a large baking dish. Peel and slice potatoes and place over pineapple; sprinkle with sugar. Season pork steaks with salt and pepper; place on top of sweet potatoes Arrange bacon strips on top Cover and bake in a moderate (350°F.) oven for 1¼ hours or until fork tender Remove the cover and increase the temperature to hot (450°F.) for the last 10 minutes of cooking time to brown the chops and bacon.

Meat loaf will not stick to its pan if you place a strip or two of bacon on the bottom of the pan before packing the meat mixture in it.

Creamed left over beef takes on new sparkle when you add a bit of curry powder to it and serve over a bed of rice which has been mixed with a bit of chopped parsley for color and flavor

Make an easy and delicious sauce for ice cream with a peach topping like this: melt ¼ cup currant jelly with 1 cup raspberry juice and pulp. Thicken with 2 tablespoons of cornstarch mixed with 1 tablespoon of water and cook until thickened. Chill before serving.

Want a delicious spread for hot biscuits? Spread cottage cheese in a baking dish and dot with butter. Serve with jelly.

Successful Parenthood

BY

MRS. CATHERINE CONRAD EDWARDS

Associate Editor, Parents' Magazine

"IT'S THIN BECAUSE he wears himself out carrying around all the food he eats!" That's what adults used to say about growing boys, and mothers often worried over the fact that their sons ate more than their husbands. Now the matter has been settled by actual measurements of the energy outgo and calorie intake of men and boys, and the youngsters won on actually needing more and bigger second helpings than their fathers.

This experiment has been going on for five years and is a cooperative project of the nutrition laboratory at Teachers College, Columbia University, and the bureau of home nutrition and home economics of the U. S. department of agriculture. The findings show that boys use more energy per unit of weight for doing the same jobs their fathers do with much less output.

This is especially noticeable in dressing and undressing, partly because adults have learned to waste less energy in accomplishing these daily tasks. Men ride a bicycle with more economy of effort than boys, and it will be no surprise that they burn up less body fuel listening to the radio than an excitable youngster does.

The researchers found that girls, too, need more food in relation to size than do adults, though not as much more as their brothers require.

It was found, for example, that a 10-year-old who is on the go most of the day can consume 3000 calories daily, and stay at normal weight, while his less active father would soon have a spare tire around his waist on such a hearty diet. Of course, less active children would also grow stocky on so generous an allowance of food, though surplus weight is soon outgrown at this age so it isn't necessary to be too strict about curbing the gargantuan appetites of small boys.

It is important, however, to see that this mountainous supply of food is well balanced as to nutritive values. The youngster who wants to make a whole meal out of sweet corn and potatoes needs to be restrained and his diet varied with fruits, green vegetables, eggs and meat. It is essential, too, that small boys have a quart of milk (675 calories), each day, though it doesn't all have to be taken as a beverage. Fortunately youngsters rarely have to be cajoled (radio giveaways to the contrary notwithstanding) to eat a big bowl of cereal at least once a day and bread and butter disappears like melting sugar when they come in from play with an appetite.

Food plays another gratifying role in the lives of boys and girls —they find its preparation great fun and many an otherwise dull afternoon can be enlivened by letting them stir a ready-mix into delectable tea cakes, or by turning over the making of hamburgers or hot dogs to the most willing consumers of these American appetite soothers.

Homemade root beer cuts down the soft drink bill and the children can make it themselves. And a freezer of ice cream sets mouths watering to keep children busy during its long preparation.

Diarist Vividly Describes 1852 Cross-Country Journey

Saturday, Jun 12

My head is better indeed quite well & my diarrehs is better also, yet I feel the effects of the heat in my body & limbs. I dare not stir out in the Sun at all & am housed all day, save morning and evening.

We get no news from the S S Lewis as yet and the prospect becomes darker & darker every day. She has been out from Boston now 96 days & I have concuded to take passage on board a Brig called the Hannah Sprague which will sail from here next week. This stay I dread but I dread more the danger of being sick. I cannot fail of being sick if I stay here much longer & by taking a trip on board this Bark I shall I hope avoid the fever. They will be probably about 200 of us & we shall be most likely from 40 to 60 days in making this trip to Cal. Yet we are looking every hour for the SS Lewis but it seems something must have happened to her or she would of been here before this. Should she arrive before we are off we shall take her or any other boat that calls here that we can take passage on—under the present aspect of our situation everyone feels to call upon his Maker for assistance.

Sunday, June 13

Again we are informed another of our number has left us, gone to the Spirit land and another will probably die before night. Thus we pass away one after another. Last evening the passengers who left N York May 20 commenced arriving and by them we heard nothing of the Lewis. Yet from the fact there were but 365 to go up in the Pacific we had great hopes we might some of us leave this place. This morn about 9 oc. the Pacific arrived, having been sent for a distance of some 15 miles to coal and water and every one was on tip toe to learn whether any of of our number could get away in her, but before noon we became satisfied we were to be disappointed and down went our spirits again still lower than ever & whilst we were mourning over our situation some one at our window discovered a smoke at sea, and immediately every eye was pointed in the direction of the smoke & every spy glass was in the hands of Old Sea Captains & in a short time it was announced to be a steamer, but whether it was one that was to take us off or not was the all exciting topic of conversation. She was moving in the direction of our location & shortly it was announced to be a propellor & if so must be either the S S Lewis or the Pioneer either of which would relieve us. When within about 5 miles it was ascertained to be the SS Lewis & then if you ever the despondding cheer up & hearts that were deed to revive again, it was when it was known for a certainty to be the S S Lewis. And many with tears of joy could say, Surely in the days of our trouble we called upon the Lord and he heard our voice, and though trouble endureth for a night, joy came in the morning, and it was considered by all to be a Godsend, and few eyes will be closed this night until the Lord is praised for his loving kindness & protection. I never saw anything that so revived the sick and made disease leave the countenances of the weary in spirit at this arrival.

A man from Connecticut has died this P.M. by the name of Everitt, making I think 199 of our number. Poor fellow, he died without being encouraged by news that has made many a poor fellow leap for joy.

* * * *

As previously noted we are unable to complete the account of this journey as the rest of the story is written in pencil and some of it we cannot decipher. The party of 800 went aboard the Lewis on Tuesday, June 15, 1852, and at 6 P.M. started for California. They arrived at San Francisco on Thursday, July 8, after a voyage in which several passengers died.

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Happenings That Affect the Dinner Pails, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills of Every Individual—National and International Problems Inseparable from Local Welfare

One of the liveliest and most forthright contributions to the national defense controversy appeared in the Saturday Evening Post for June 25. Written by Rear Admiral D V Gallery, and titled "An Admiral talks Back to the Airmen," it is a powerfully reasoned refutation of the theory that we can safely base our whole defense plans on long-range bombers and the A-bomb, and largely eliminate such costly services as the Navy and the Army ground forces.

Admiral Gallery holds that the atomic blitz "is a desperation concept which holds good only for a war of the United States versus the rest of the world. It is an all-out business which can't stop at geographical or political boundaries." The reasoning here is simple. If we should go to war with Russia, the Soviet's first move would naturally be to spread out all over Europe. Red forces would be in control in France and Italy as well as behind the iron curtain. In that event, asks the Admiral, "Do we blitz Paris, Rome and Brussels?" If we did, he thinks, we would advance the cause of communism immeasurably, and "we might win the war in thirty days and lose the peace for the next 300 years."

The engaging arguments of Air Force partisans have pretty well obscured this phase of the problem. But it is a point which is uppermost in the minds of many military men of undoubted competence and experience. General Omar Bradley, whom many consider to be one of the great combat commanders of history, has said, "However crippling air attack can be, I am convinced beyond any reasonable doubt that should this nation be forced into still another conflict, we shall once more be forced to gain the inevitable victory over dead bodies—those of our soldiers on the ground . . . . Ultimately a war between nations is reduced to one man defending his land while another tries to invade it."

The whole history of war amounts to a factual endorsement of this idea. The colossal air pounding Germany took in the last war did not bring her to her knees. It did not destroy her ability to make war, which was the goal of strategic bombing. Indeed, toward the end, the strategic bombing plan was largely abandoned, and the Allied air forces were devoted to tactical bombing of military objectives, as a preparation for invasion by sea-supported ground troops. Admiral Gallery touches on an extremely important point when he observes that the Air Force philosophy has a dangerous popular appeal simply because "it sweeps all the unpleasant facts of war under the rug and promises easy victory without much fighting." Any nation would like to win a great war with a small expenditure of men, money and machines. No nation ever has.

WOMEN VETERANS ELIGIBLE FOR VET MEDICAL CARE

Women veterans are eligible for the same medical care as male veterans, Richard E Fortier, Officer in Charge, of the Veterans Administration Office in Lewiston, states.

These veterans, Fortier stated, are granted out-patient treatment and priority for hospitalization for service-connected disabilities, and also may be treated in VA hospitals for non-service-connected disabilities, provided that a bed is available and they cannot afford to pay for treatment elsewhere.

However, unlike the male veterans, female veterans may receive treatment in non-VA hospitals for nonservice-connected disabilities which are emergent in nature, provided that prior approval is obtained from the VA. The only exception is in the case of pregnancy.
